HEADS UP

Janine – do you know him? By the end of the conversation he said he does some editing for the SunCurrent, not just the Bloomington SunCurrent.

Jim – I did give him your name as the leader of our planning group. He may contact you.

I did give it back to him a bit about how most reporters tell me initially that they are a reporter and for what paper, before interviewing me. I think he has an agenda against organizing and he lead me to believe he is just an interested resident at the beginning of the conversation.

I did attempt to explain how the plan is not about organizing, but many topics. Organizing hauling is discussed only as one of several options for improving the system. He was difficult to talk with.

Ben,

He might contact you. He called me this AM and asked several questions about the Solid Waste Management Plan with the angle that the City is organizing hauling – taking residents' right to select a hauler. He gave me the impression of an interest as a resident. . . Although he is a resident, he also writes for the local paper and it was not until the end of the conversation did he explain how he was working on a story. This story may be more broad than Bloomington. SunCurrent provides a local newspaper in many cities.

I gave him your contact information for more information about the County's solid waste program.

Just a heads up – he twisted many things I said and would talk over me.
